those of us who grew up in the through hole age of electronic packaging are probably more amazed and appreciative than are our children at the incredible growth of electronic performance capability my son an electrical engineering student seems almost to take for granted the innovations that leave me somewhat awestruck at times electronic circuit designers delight in packing more punch into less volume while reminding us that their job has become increasingly challenging the lay person also has learned from the media that the industry has been working wonders in shrinking the transistor and expanding the power of the chip much attention is focussed on the silicon and on the marvelous production and entertainment tools we now see in our offices and homes between the silicon and the end product lies the less publicized world of circuit level packaging we leave it to a cadre of technologists to take the schematics and parts lists and to develop the processes that tum the designers concepts into physical reality and while the silicon transistor is shrinking the engineering challenges of packaging multiple chips and associated components into increasingly dense subsystems are growing further the transistor may have to function without failure through severe industrial or military environments over the lifetime of the product this is the first volume to provide a wide range of postcolonial interpretations of and commentaries upon significant texts in the hebrew bible the volume intersects with the work of the key theorists in postcolonial studies such as fanon senghor said and spivak as well as with scholars such as sugirtharajah kwok pui lan and segovia who have applied this theory to biblical studies texts have been chosen specifically for their relevance to postcolonial discourse rather than seeking to cover each biblical document this volume is designed to demonstrate how historical criticism postmodernism and the important concerns of postcolonial readings may be integrated to obtain an informed explanation of the hebrew bible and the writings of early judaism the chapters are written by scholars who represent a spectrum of national indigenous and diasporic contexts taken together these perspectives and the interpretations they yield represent a continued expansion of the manner in which old testament texts are read and interpreted through postcolonial lenses reminding readers that the interpretive trajectories of these texts are almost inexhaustible as such the volume serves as not only an addition to ongoing scholarship on postcolonialism but also as an expansion of the horizon for dialogue
